General conditions

The cat must be at least 14 weeks old when delivered. The cat must be chipped and the number must be in or on the pedigree – eg with the use of the microchip label. The cat should not be rehomed, sold or put down without prior contact to the seller. The buyer commits to taking the best possible care of the physical and mental needs of the cat. Should the cat become ill or hurt, a veterinarian should immediately be contacted. The cat should be seen by a vet at least once a year. Any special terms and conditions may be added on the following page(s).

Health

When the cat is delivered, it has been vaccinated with the core cat vaccines, which is documented either on the pedigree or in separate documentation, issued by a veterinarian. The documentation will specify the type of vaccine used as well as the date of the vaccination. The Felis Danica Health Statement should also be filled in by the veterinarian (back of pedigree book, or separate FD certificate)

Cat for company – breeding – show?

No breeder can guarantee how a cat will look when it grows up, and the term "Show cat" only means that the cat has no faults that will disqualify it from being shown in accordance with the standard for the breed and colour in question. Seller should inform the buyer of the most important characteristics of the breed.

Cats for breeding must have a specific certificate from Felis Danica: the Felis Danica health certificate, which is shown on the back of the pedigree or can be downloaded from the Felis Danica website (www.felisdanica.dk) The certificate specifies that:

- The cat does not have or show sign of having had umbilical hernia
- The cat, if male, have both testicles descended normally to the scrotum
- The cat does not suffer from congenital abnormalities such as entropion, ectropion, polydactyly, oligodactyly, deafness, blindness, or any palpable structural deformities of the bone structure, including spine and chest.

Some breeds may have special requirements for breeding cats – seller should inform the buyer of any known problems within the breed, including any specific tests which should be carried out before the cat is used in breeding. The Felis Danica clubs or the Felis Danica Breeding Commission may be contacted in case of doubt – they will be able to provide further information.
